After the New York Times revealed in 2005 that the NSA was spying on Americans phone calls and e-mail without Constitutionally-required court warrants, the Bush administration openly defended this practice which also violated the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act. All details of the highly secret program remained hidden from the public-until Klein came forward. A technician for over 22 years at telecom giant ATT, Klein was working in the Internet room in San Francisco in 2003 and discovered the NSA was vacuuming everyone s communications into a secret room, and he had the documents to prove it (sample pages included). He went to the media in 2006, and then became a witness in a lawsuit brought against the company by the Electronic Frontier Foundation.
